Student Life

Barnard students are not the only ones who live in dorms. As Sarah Kim's hamster knows, all are welcome in Plimpton.

Residence Halls provide a place to learn about life. . .

Despite the tremendous drive of Barnard students, the atmosphere in the dorms tends to stay very low key and supportive. Women at Barnard are very determined to do well and seeing this, everyone is motivated to work hard. Whether providing a place to study or to socialize, the residence halls are a place to learn about life.

-Devan Pierce

After a long day of classes, Nicole Bond relaxes with a magazine in her dorm's kitchen.

Eating Well

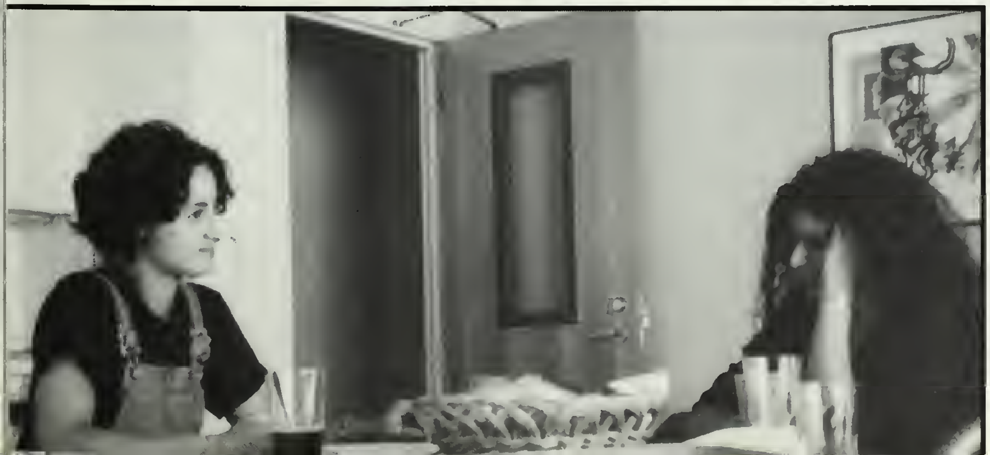
Students, faculty and administration gather at McIntosh daily for lunch.

These days, there is a variety of food available. . .

Food is important to everyone, but good health is an important issue at Barnard. The college emphasizes eating a well balanced meal, but for students it is also important to eat a delicious meal. Barnard has reconciled these two needs by improving the dining menu. In recent years, Aramark has tried to accomodate the different tastes of students by offering a variety of food in Hewitt Dining Hall. Though many years ago the food selection was limited, Barnard women now have a choice of pizza, hot plates, pasta, grill works or sandwiches, in addition to vegetarian, Vegan, and Kosher options.

In between classes, grab a quick snack at the Quad Cafe.



Tired of eating in the Hewitt dining room, these two bring their food back to their Tower kitchen for a change of scenery.

Winnie and Elizabeth show off their newly decorated Skip Stop Express office.

The good thing about commuting is. . .

Although most people think of college as a chance to live away from home, there are many students who commute to school everyday. Even though the commuters are not on campus 24-7, they are still very much in tune with what's happening on campus. Many events are planned especially for the commuters as a way of helping them get more acquainted with each other and encourage involvement in campus life. The good thing about commuting is that commuters have the option of getting away from this chaotic campus. When in need, they can return to their safe haven: home.

Commuting in NYC is often an adventure, especially when the train is running late.

Alexandra Standish invited her commuting friends, Ashleigh Barker and Marilyn Polo for a lovely dinner at her house.

"Top three reasons to commute to Barnard: home-cooked meals, private bathrooms, and no annoying roommates." - Skip Stop Express

When the sun comes out. . . Lehman Lawn will be a hot spot

Barnard College really provides it's students with a home away from home. The Quad cafe has become increasingly popular with its late hours and convenient location. Who can resist running down there for a late night snack? McIntosh also provides the same luxury with a little more variety. When the sun comes out you can guarantee that the Lehman Lawn will be a hot spot! Everyone appreciates the little-sanctuary it provides from the crazy everyday life of New York City.

Tom's Restaurant is not only famous on Seinfield, it is also famous among Columbia students.

Heidi seems to be deep in thought as she studies.

It's common to see tons of stressed students. . .

The reason everyone studies hard in high school is to get into a good college. Now that everyone is at the college of their choice, they study hard in order to get where they want to be once they graduate. Women at Barnard take their work seriously. That's why it is common to see tons of stressed students mulling around, especially during midterms and finals. When the inevitable arrives, the libraries are crammed with students: noses in books. The computer labs are crowded with anxious people waiting to finish up papers, or to print out last minute revisions. All in all, academics is definitely an important aspect in everyone's life here at Barnard.

Sun's out! Catch some rays while studying out on Lehman Lawn.

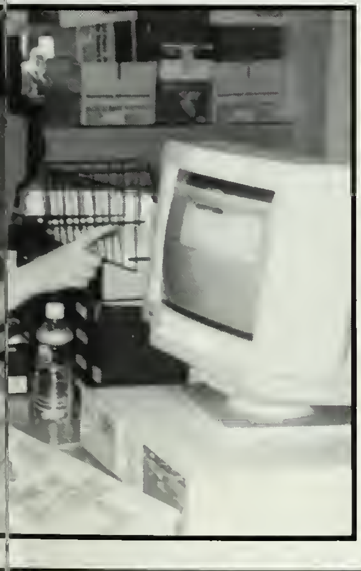
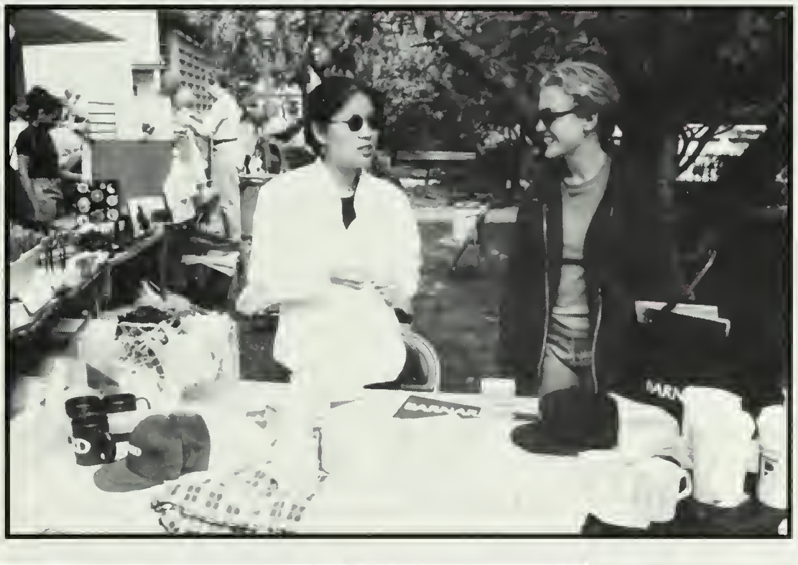
Career options are in the minds of many. . .

The goal of each individual at Barnard is to discover what they would like to do with their lives. Career options are in the minds of many, not just seniors. The Career Development office is a place where students can go to find jobs and internships that will help them gain hands-on experience within their field of interest. A staff of counselors give advice to students about job hunting techniques, resume formats, and other career oriented questions the students have.





These students gain social skills by working as salespeople for the Barnard Student store.

The annual graduate schools fair was held to give guidance to graduating seniors who want to pursue a higher education.

Joy Harden shows off the stuffed animal she bought at the vendors' fair to her friend.

Barnard students are very active. . .

The school spirit of Barnard really revolves around the individual. Everyone supports school sponsored events, but the spirit of students tends to lie in the way they involve themselves with various organizations. Some dedicate their time to volunteer for Community Impact sponsored programs, while others coordinate events through McAC. Also, some students are actively involved in SGA. The spirit of Barnard women is strong and evident in everything they set out to do.

Ultimately when you least expect it. . .

Friends come and go, and they are also hard to come by. But College is often a place where you can find your bosom buddy. There are many obstacles and hardships that come in the way of the quest for a "true friend," but these eventually pass. When you least expect it, you find a true friend in the midst of harsh reality--a place where you thought you'd be alone forever, with no one to trust or share secrets with. Finding a friend is hard, but a longlasting friendship is definitely worth the trouble!

Friends can always share a smile together.

Weekends are also times to visit with old friends

When the weekend rolls around, Barnard students frequently look to the city to provide them with an escape from their hectic schedules. Whether you go shopping on Broadway, go dancing at one of the many clubs of New York, or just relax with some friends at a local bar, everyone can find something to do for fun. The weekends are also times to visit with old friends and family. Some like to get away from the busy city life, while others find sanctuary in an art museum or a calming stroll through Central Park.

The dreaded Sunday, the day before Monday

After a fun and relaxing weekend, Sunday night is here once again. The dreadful Sunday. The day before Monday. The night when you must catch up homework, and prepare yourself for Monday classes. Sunday is normally considered to be a day for lounging around, but for Barnard women it is time to get back to reality, time to head to the library and open that long neglected text book. . . Regardless of the never-ending work load that needs to be finished or started before Monday arrives, Sunday night is also time to catch up with friends you haven't seen during the weekend.

The City

New York City is the place to go sightseeing - even for city residents. With so many sites, the island of Manhattan is loaded with history. Even though it is small, there is so much important ground to cover, that the sightseeing never stops.

Rockefeller Center, in Midtown Manhattan is a seasonal tourist attraction. In the winter, a skating rink is constructed next to a huge Christmas tree. In summer the same area becomes an outdoor cafe to sit and take a break from sightseeing or work.

The Empire State Building once was the tallest building in the world. Since then, architects have built skyscrapers that have surpassed it in height but not in fame.

Lincoln Center, Times Square and Columbus Circle are just some of New York's attractions.

Shopping

What little money we New Yorkers have seems to flow right through our fingers - mainly in purchasing clothes to adorn the rest of our bodies. But, oh, the damage on our bank accounts!

Betsy Johnson's trendy stylings can be found over on Colubus or down in Soho. Expensive and chic, her designs work well for special occasions.

Oversized billboards featuring scantily clad models are the surest sign that you've reached Times Square. Strangely, none of the stores advertised are actually located in Times Square. They are housed further east on 5th Avenue.

The most famous toy store in the country is right on 5th Avenue and attracts even the most cynical New Yorkers.

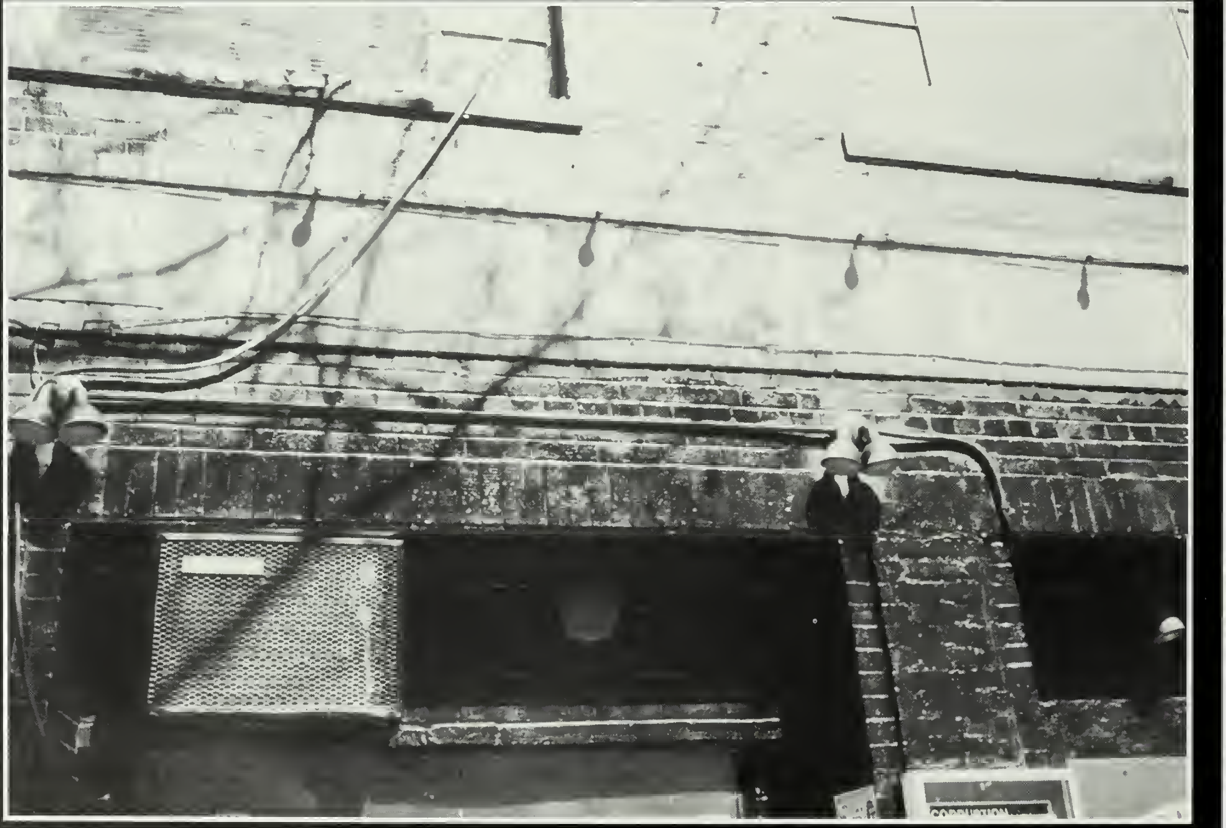
Vendors selling used books and the like, can be found on the streets of Morningside Heights and throughout the city. Books for a bargain, they're a great deal!

Street fairs are a favorite pastime for students willing to rummage. Bright colors and the smell of deep fried foods are telling signs that a fair is just around the corner.

Nightlife

"We love the nightlife! We like to boogie..." Every moment they are not in class, Barnard students can be found among the rest of the New York party-goers, at the city's various bars, clubs, and shows. Living for the weekend, we have more freedom than most city residents, but still not enough time to do it all.



Coney Island High, on St. Mark's Place, in the Village, is a hot spot for those of us who enjoy live music and an eclectic mix of people.

Arts and Entertainment

New York City is a cultural center, chock full of museums, theaters, and music halls enjoyed by residents and tourists alike. The Arts scene is such a big part of the City, that the museums and theaters have become historic works themselves! From musicals to fine art, there's something for all tastes.

The Metropolitan Museum of Art is located on a strip known as the Museum mile on the Upper East Side. Known fondly as "the met", this museum holds some of the world's greatest masterpieces, as well as lesser-known treasures.

Manhattan is a food connoisseurs' fantasy come true. If ambience is what you're after, you can enjoy any and all kinds of food in the city's most distinctive and nondescript eateries. Barnard students perpetually seem to be drawn to the simple yet sophisticated bagel and coffee combo.

Coffee. What can we say - there's a coffee shop on every corner. It seems us New Yorker's can never get enough.

For students cooped up in libraries and dorm high-rises, it sometimes seems like New York is a metropolis of gloomy grey. But for those willing to venture off the paved path, they'll find that New York is full of green spots - from Central Park to Riverside park right next door.

Bethesda fountain in Central Park provides a place for city residents to cool off in one of New York's sweltering heat waves. Its also a good place to indulge in people-watching, strolling, and just hanging out.

New York's Botanical Gardens -both in Brooklyn and uptown - provide a cultural and inviting respite from the daily grind of living in the city.

The photo on the left shows how Central Park is truly the center of the city. This aerial view shows the park as an oasis of nature in the midst of urban sprawl.

This staute invites New York CIty residents and tourists alike into Central Park via its main entrance on Central Park South.

Washington Square Park (L.) and Riverside Park (R.) are examples of the diversity in city parks. The first is for idly sitting; the latter is for those on the move.

Battery Park, at the tip of southern Manhattan, is the most unlikely park of them all. But it does provide a great place to see the Statue of Liberty from Manhattan soil.

SENIOR MOMENTS

ost Memorable Moment:

nally hooking up with that suitemate I liked last year! The mouse in my om; the union strike; Take Back the Night; IRC; CUnity; chatting on IRC all hours of the night in the Brooks computer lab first year; the struggle er Ethnic Studies: taking over Low Library and Hamilton Hall; sitting on windowsill in the highrise with my significant other; looking at the ening skyline of downtown NYC and thinking; "Life doesn't get much tter than this". They've all been memorable...

teresting/Stupid Pick-up Lines:

e never seen what an all-girls dorm looks like!
ring a game of pool: Please help me aim my stick.
ou think you feel good, wait 'til you feel me.
u've got a nice body - wanna share some of that?
study with you, baby.
e guy gave me the keys to his BMW.
ile walking home in the freezing cold: I'll warm you up.

Worst Roommate Experience:

First-year roommate never washed her clothes; she took 1.5 hours to get ready every morning; beginning at 7:30 am and waking me up with her hairdryer; showered occasionally; never washed her dishes; her clothes; or her body (this was a problem); doing Calculus problems in her sleep; and walking to and from the shower naked.

rts of Barnard Life that You Will Miss:

nazing professors; library man who checks ID's; grilled American cheese on white from McIntosh; the nnels in the winter; ROLM phones and caller ID; Carl Lewis' pancakes at Saturday morning brunch; Tony om McIntosh deli counter; and Ramon from meal plan - he's got a smile 'til the end of the day!

ot Miss:

riting a paper until 6am only to realize that the printer won't print; roaches!; program filing; lack of ating and central A/C; signing guests in and ID checking; and the computer systems.

ost Embarrassing Moment:

pping on the cobblestones; walked around half the day h my pants unzipped; falling on my butt in front of ie's in plain daylight for no reason; after being told by a rvard Grad school rep that I seemed to be a viable plicant, I walked out of McIntosh and walked into a pole; marking: "who the heck is Judith Shapiro?" when some- e pointed her out standing behind me; I was out with my ends and I was feeling really bloated and was relieved en we went to a club with loud music and I decided to let e rip when the DJ stopped the music.

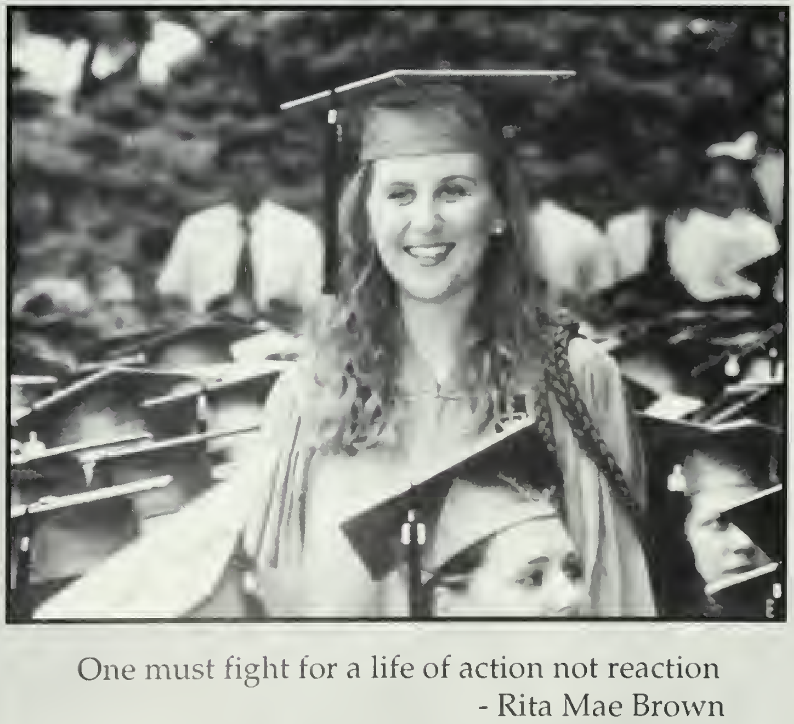
Graduation 1998

Presentation of Degree Candidates Barnard College, 19 May 1998

We, the Barnard class of 1998, made our final walk as students from Barnard Hall to Lehman Lawn, cheered on by our professors. Sunlight and warm, springtime air provided the perfect setting as we listened to our class president Helen Eliassian discuss the many ways that the class arrived to and has progressed at Barnard. Meghan Quinn reflected on the Barnard experience, stressing the sense of community our faculty and administration have created for us. Dean Denburg and President Shapiro both have personal ties to our class: Dean Denburg adopted our class as she sent her first daughter to college; President Shapiro joined the Barnard community with us in 1994 and celebrated the completion of her first four years as well. Barnard's ceremony was definitely the more sentimental of the two graduations, as we began to realize that we were leaving friends and moving on to the next stage of our lives.

CLASS OF 1998



One must fight for a life of action not reaction
- Rita Mae Brown

Graduation 1998

Conferring of Degrees
Columbia University, 20 May 1998

President of the University, George Rupp, conferred degrees to each of the separate schools of Columbia University in a beautiful, sunny, morning ceremony. The graduates, too, were radiant as they celebrated openly on Low Library Steps. With Cliff's Notes, torn newspapers, model buildings, paper planes, popping champagne bottles, confetti and Monopoly money, each school competed to out do the others. The Barnard College Class of 1998 emerged victorious. As we marched across Broadway to Columbia's campus and throughout the ceremony until the moment our degrees were conferred, Barnard women cheered, exuberantly showing our class spirit. Honorary degrees were presented to actress Lauren Bacall and author Maurice Sendak for their humanitarian efforts, to poet laureate Rita Dove for her contributions to the arts, and to Secretary General of the United Nations Kofi Annan for his instrumental role in maintaining world peace. Without a doubt, our final celebration sent us off with a bang!

Office of the President

May 1998

Dear Class of 1998,

It has been my great pleasure getting to know you since we both arrived at Barnard's gates in the fall of 1994. As I recall, you were as excited to begin your college careers as I was to become Barnard's new president. Since that time I have enjoyed watching you make exceptional strides in the classroom and laboratory, in community programs and internships, as well as in athletics, the arts, theatre and dance.

As you prepare to leave Barnard, you will find that you are more than ready to meet the many wonderful challenges that lie ahead. You have been taught and guided by a distinguished faculty of teacher-scholars who have provided you with the intellectual and cultural capital that you will draw upon for the rest of your lives. Your Barnard education has strengthened your ability to think, to analyze and to synthesize, and to move with mental agility from task to task, project to project. You can feel assured that the discipline and determination that you have demonstrated here will continue to guide you as you seek to make a lasting difference in the world. Along the way you will also meet other equally dedicated Barnard alumnae who will work alongside you and become your life-long friends, mentors and colleagues.

You should be pleased to know that during your years here Barnard has become the most sought-after women's college in the country. The number of students applying to Barnard has risen 102% over the past six years. You have also witnessed the campus undergo a number of major transformations with infrastructure upgrades and stylish renovations benefitting every building and every person at the College. Many more exciting improvements are being planned for our facilities, which you will find highlighted in our alumnae publications in the months and years ahead. All in all, Barnard is a very "hot" college right now, and we are committed to ensuring that it remains that way.

I am confident that, as Barnard graduates, you will continue to uphold Barnard's reputation as a place where women come because they know their voices will be heard, respected and listened to. So, as you get ready to set out on new adventures and career paths, remember to confront each new challenge with the same passionate intellect and spirit you demonstrated at Barnard. I hope that you will come back soon and often to share your many stories and accomplishments with us. Remember, too, if you can't make it back in person, you can always drop us an e-mail or pay us a virtual visit on our World-Wide-Web site.

Until we see each other again, I wish you the very best with all that you continue to do and achieve.

Sincerely,

Judith Shapiro

Rest here a while and bathe in the glow of your achievement.
Reflect on the road you have travelled,
the obstacles you have overcome,
the lessons you have learned,
and the successes you have had.
But do not rest too long on your laurels for there are new dreams to dream new goals to pursue and new challenges to face.
After all this is both a GRADUATION and a COMMENCEMENT.

The Women's Crew team began in 1973 and has an important impact in the University. The Crew team is composed of women who can handle adversity. The conditions the team faced were some of the worst in the past years. However, the women rallied and handled many obstacles. With the intensity they possess we are sure to see great things in the future.

Engarde!!!! The Ladies fencing team is on the attack. This season, the team has become an unstoppable force. The Lady Lions received three gold medals at the 1997 Penn State Collegiate Open, a competition that features the top college squads from the US and Canada. Erin Smart was the undefeated champion. Susan Jennings took the Silver Medal. Columbia is in contention of going far.

Field Hockey

Both coach and players agree that the Barnard/Columbia field hockey team improved both its skills and team spirit this year. The final overall record of 4-13 (0-7 in the Ivy League) provides room for improvement, as this is only the second year that field hockey has been played as a NCAA Division I sport rather than as a club sport. In addition to providing a learning experience for the mainly first-years team, field hockey this season was characterized by high levels of enthusiasm and persistence. Next year can only be better.

Soccer

This year's soccer team looked very much like last year's. The return of star players such as co-Captains Liz Cheung and Tosh Forde, and second-year players, who are now given more time on the field, indicated that the team was full of potential. The Lions finished the season with a record of 8-9, falling short of its 12-5-1 performance last year. But the team suffered from injuries, such as Rachel Toomey's broken rib near mid-season. The soccer team played hard this year, and the defense was, as always, solid and prepared.

Stacey Martindale, high jumper, came close to breaking the school record. However, she fell a few feet short from the record, and is second on the all-time indoor performers list.

Volleyball

In the final game of the season, the Barnard/Columbia volleyball team defeated Brown, last year's Ivy League Champion with a close 3-2. The victory, Columbia's first Ivy win in three years, summed up the season well. Enduring eleven consecutive losses, the Lions were still able to come back strong, and win four of its last six games. This year's team also included two strong first-year players, Serena Lewis and Rebecca Shumsky, who contributed to the victories. We can only look forward to a better 98 Season.

Girl Power!

Women in the news this year ranged from the merely seasoned to the absolutely spicy Janet Reno, the Spice Girls, the United States Women's Hockey Team, and the Women's National Basketball Association (WNBA).

Janet Reno, the first woman attorney general of the United States, continues to earn her privileged place in the public eye. Late last year, Reno launched a new advertising campaign encouraging young people to replace guns and violence with community service. Reno's initiative is especially welcome in light of the recent murders in junior high schools and high schools across the country.

On the other side of the cultural spectrum, the Spice Girls continued their plans to turn our planet into a Spice World. The Girls—Baby, Scary, Sporty, Posh and Ginger—can call 1997 their own, with the release of their book, Girl Power, and a movie, Spice World.

Those who had fun playing other kinds of games include the U.S. Women's Hockey team and the WNBA. In its first year of existence, Women's Hockey defeated its competitors to take home a coveted gold medal—and unarguable respect for women's athletics.

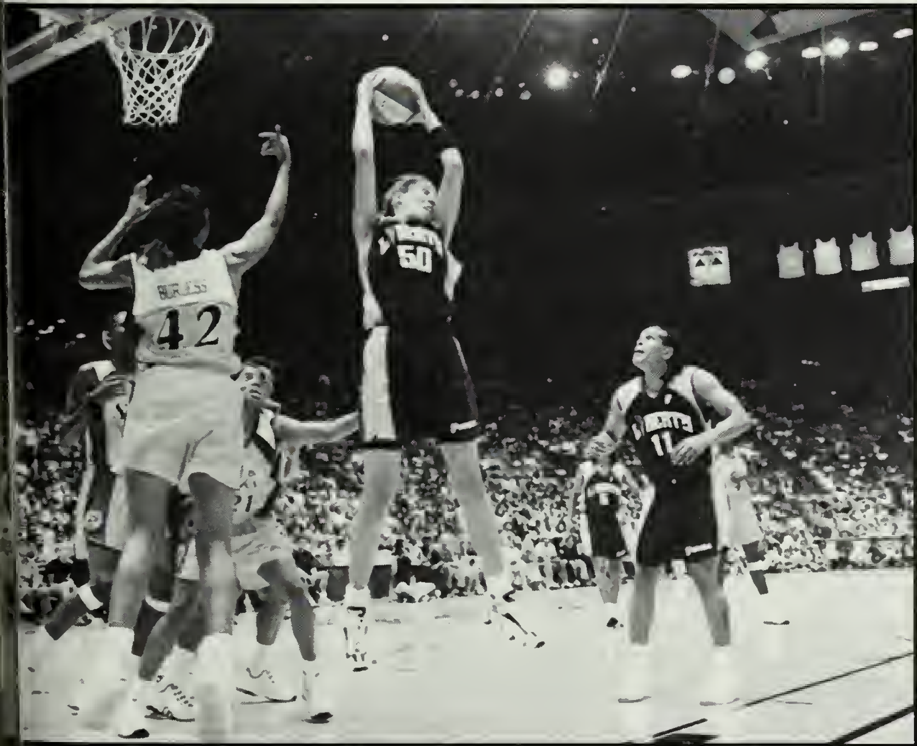
Despite early predictions of doom, the WNBA also overcame a rocky start to become a popular attraction. With more televised games and an ever-increasing group of dedicated fans, the WNBA left its mark during the 1997-1998 season.

by: Heidi Nasr

The Spice Girls have become the darling divas of the pop music world, with three Top 40 hits and a movie. Hailing from the same country that brought the world Shakespeare, some crtics wonder if the Spice Girls will stand the test of time.

The women's Ice Hockey team were star players at this year's Olympics games in Nagano, Japan.

Appointed twice during the Clinton Administration, Janet Reno has focused on America's youth, urging them to stay away from gangs, drugs, and violence.



The WNBA completed its first season with the Houston Comets defeating the New York Liberty for the championship. The eight team league will grow to ten teams during the 1998-1999 season.

Three Men and a Lady

1997 was a year that took the "middle" out of "Middle East," as politics in this difficult region became increasingly polarized and the United States became more involved.

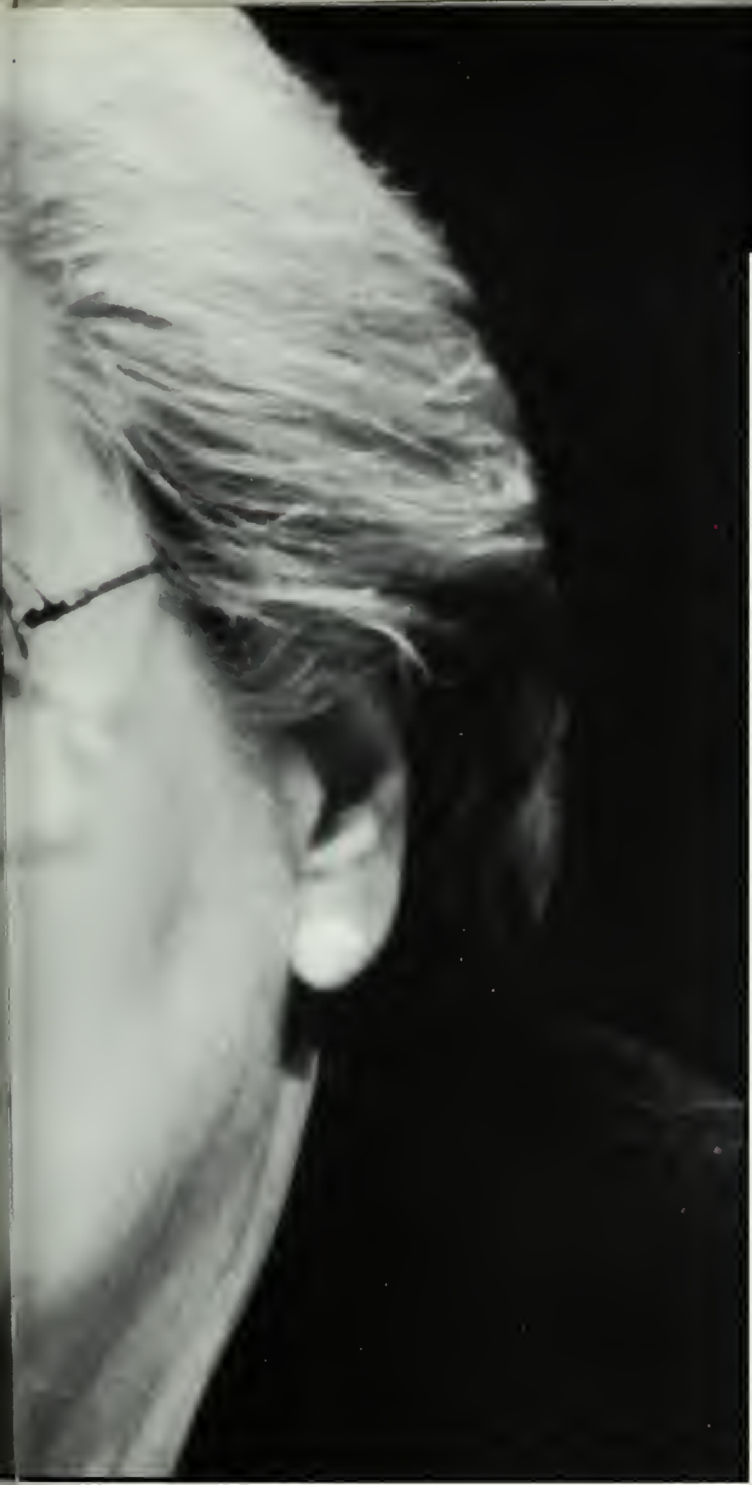
Madeleine Albright, the most visible U.S. Secretary of State since Henry Kissinger, used her trademark ferocious courage to keep American interests safe in a year of unpredictable politics. The only woman on the shaky international political stage, Albright defended her turf admirably.

Albright's chief project this year was preventing her political showdown with Saddam Hussein from escalating into something more serious. The results of Albright's efforts are yet to be known.

Israeli Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu and Yassar Arafat, the chairman of the Palestinian Liberation Organization (PLO) continued to negotiate the fourth year of an uneasy peace. Although the two men are separated by a generation in their ages, they are similar in their refusal to back down from their beliefs.

by: Heidi Nasr

Israel's first American-style politician, Benjamin Netanyahu rejected the land-for-peace bargain with the Palestinians. Due to his hard line stance, dozens of deaths by terrorism plagued Israel, and ultimately forced Netanyahu to halt peace proceedings indefinitely.



As the top ranking woman in the history of the U.S. government, Madeleine Albright has been the most visible and active Secretary of State.

Uncooperative with the United Nations weapons inspections earlier this year, Saddam Hussein has kept the United States' attention in the Middle East.

A key leader in maintaining peace in the Middle East, Yassar Arafat has not been able to maintain a good relationship with Israel's Prime Minister, Benjamin Netanyahu.

President Clinton's Trials and Tribulations

President Bill Clinton, long known as "Slick Willie" for his aptitude at escaping from scandals, had yet more obstacles to negotiate in 1997-1998.

Clinton's troubles started again shortly after his second inauguration in early 1997, when talk began to circulate of campaign finance violations in the White House.

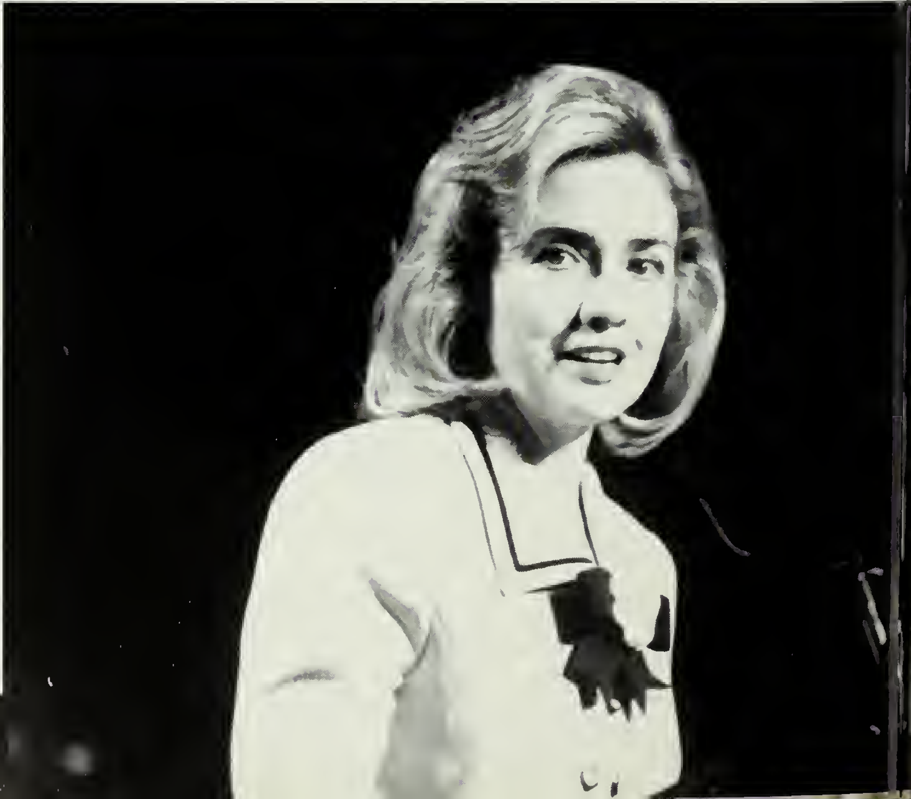
Then Clinton's daugher Chelsea left the White House a little emptier when she enrolled at Stanford University, 3,000 miles from home.

The White House did not remain empty for long, however, as reporters swarmed around it later on in the year. In the course of his Whitewater investigation, Special Prosecutor Kenneth Starr unearthed more of Clinton's questionable personal history.

When Clinton was accused of having a sexual relationship with Monica Lewinsky, a 21-year-old White House intern, many politicians were making impeachment noises.

Through it all, however, the economy remained strong, and Clinton did achieve the remarkable feat of submitting a balanced budget to Congress in 1997 for the first time in 17 years.

by: Heidi Nasr



Hilary Clinton reduced her famed visibility as Clinton picked his way around personal and political troubles.

President William Jefferson Clinton and Vice President Al Gore overcame a dificult year on the strength of a good economy.

First Daughter Chelsea made her way across the country to go to Stanford, far from the stuffiness and tension of Washington.

The second inauguration of Clinton and Gore was one of the first —and last— moments of decisive victory and joy for the beleagured pair.

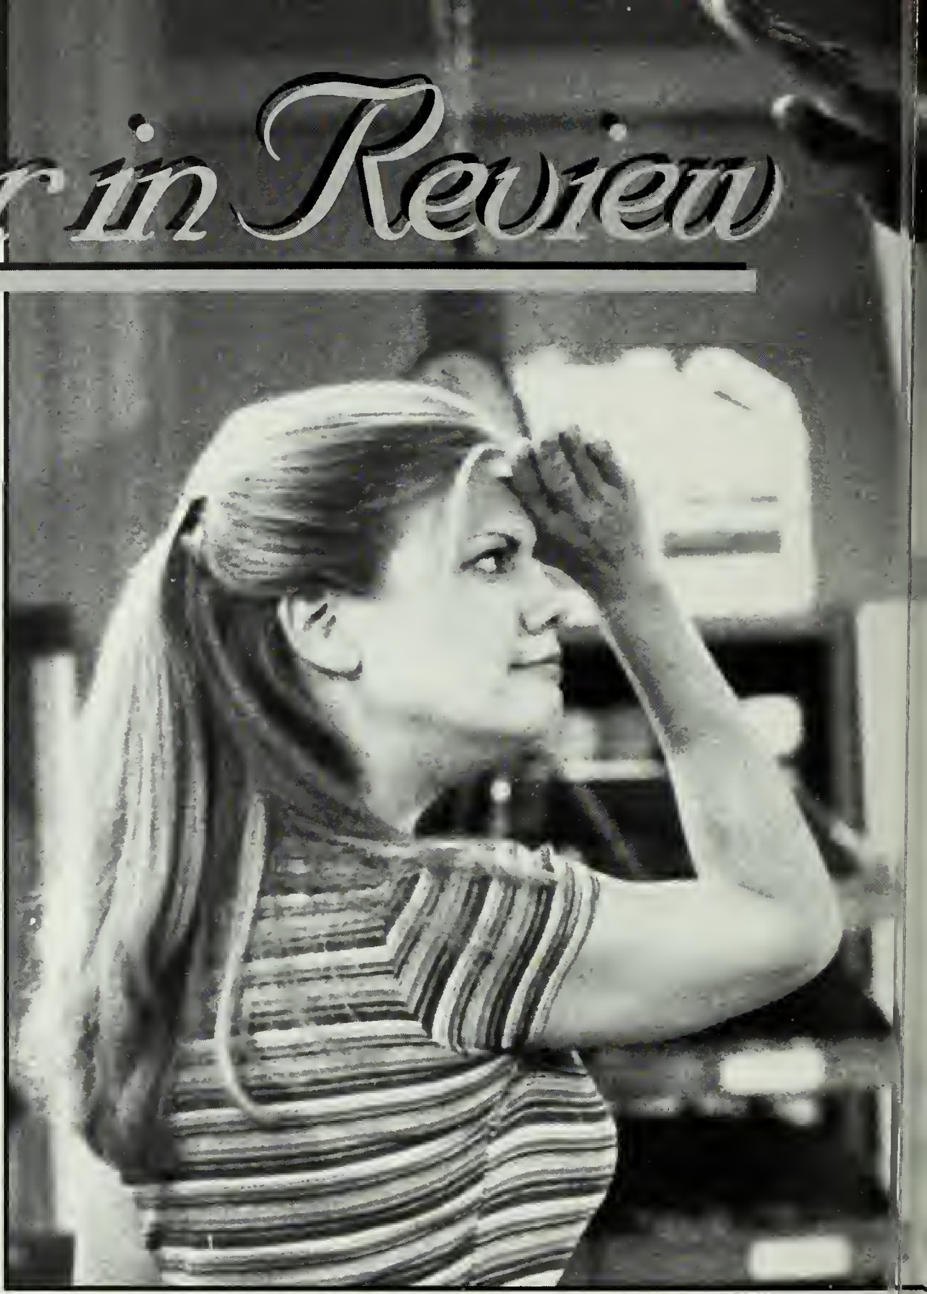
Space Invaders



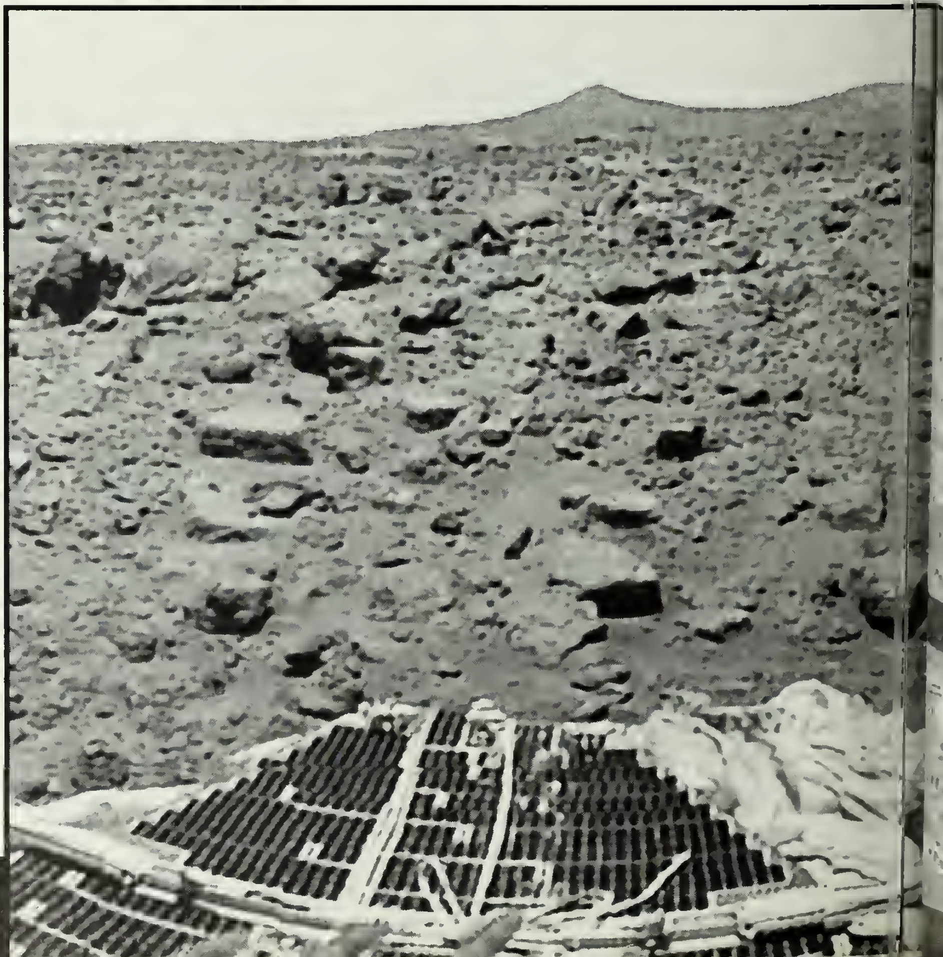
Americans kept their eyes on the skies this year, as much to watch out for falling pieces of the Mir space station as to observe the stratospheric success of the NBC sitcom, Third Rock From the Sun.

The Mir space station, which has made more than 60,000 trips around the earth, started to show its age this year. The module, which houses six astronauts, has been in orbit for 12 years, 7 years longer than was planned. Each week this year brought more news of another disabled system or personal conflict aboard Mir. Mir is one component of a plan to build an international space station by 2002.

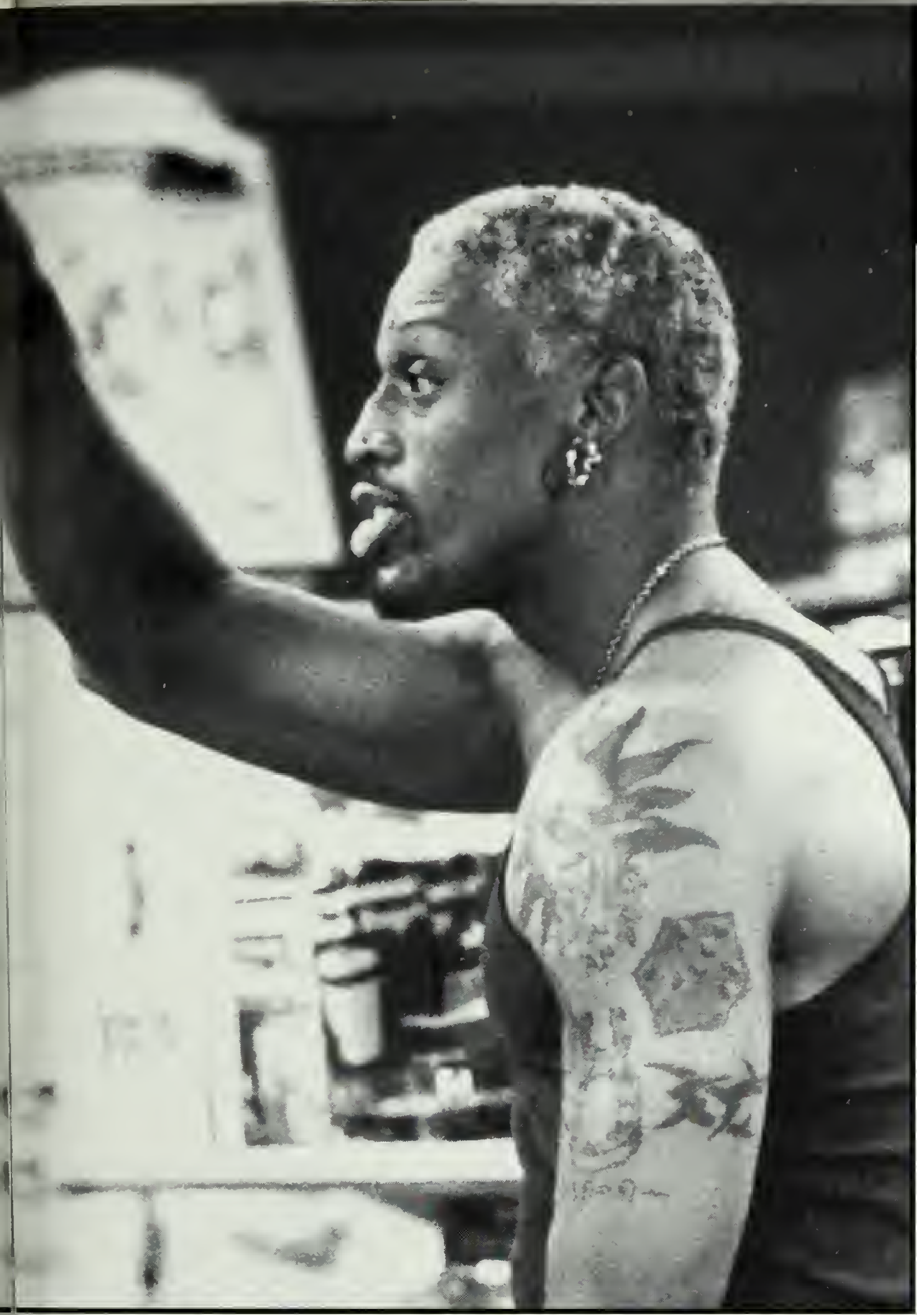
Also beset by technological troubles, the petite Sojourner mobile explorer, part of the Pathfinder mission, landed on Mars to gather soil and rocks for the scientist back here on earth. The information sent back from Sojourner held many people rapt as it explained a little more of the mystery of the red planet.

The one unqualified intergalactic success of the year was Third Rock From the Sun, a television show about a group of winsome aliens desperate to fit in—which also explains the appeal of the Spice Girls. How can we resist?

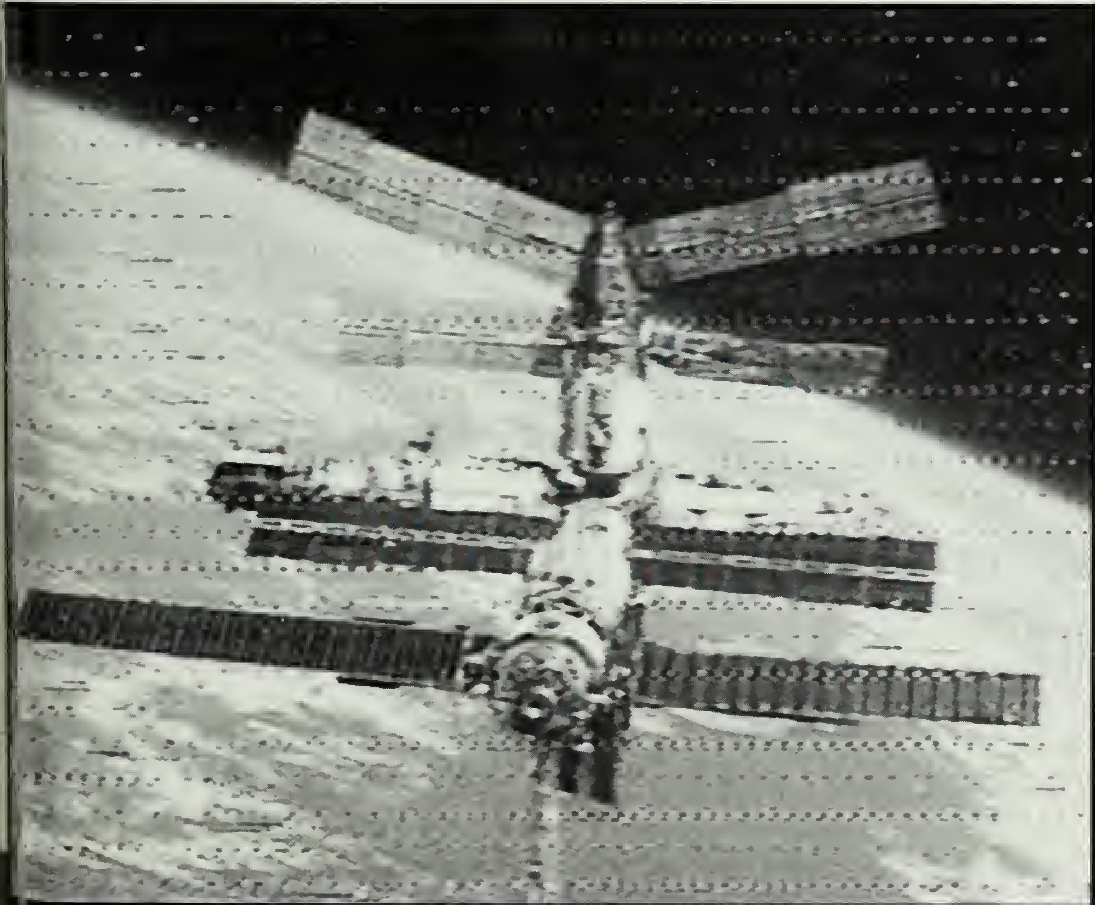
by: Heidi Nasr



The Pathfinder mission found the scientific beauty in the bleak Martian landscape.



Third Rock From the Sun featured such otherwordly guests as basketball star Dennis Rodman, as one of NBC's strongest prime time sitcom.



In 1994 the United States and Russia agreed to conduct joint missions aboard the Mir space station - the first phase of a program designed to help build an International Space Station.

In Memoriam

Mother Teresa and Diana , Princess of Wales, were different women, but both symbolized the strength of the humanitarian spirit. The spirit of serenity and giving also suffered a blow as folk singer John Denver died in a plane crash in October.

Princess Diana was a woman who ably channeled her own fame into many of the charities she helped. Millions of people thronged in London to participate in Diana's funeral in September, which was as grand, poetic, and tragic as her life. Her husband, Prince Charles, and her two sons, Prince William and Prince Harry, showed strength through their grief.

Mother Teresa, perhaps the premier symbol of selflessness in this half of the century, dedicated her life to helping those who were poor, sick, or dying. In doing so, she did something for us who were not any of those things—perhaps one of the reasons she received the Nobel Peace Prize in 1979. Mother Teresa passed away shortly after Diana's death, uniting the two women forever in the popular memory.

John Denver was a great symbol of personal happiness in the 1970s. Optimistic songs such as "Rocky Mountain High" guaranteed him a place in the dark pessimism of the 1970s.

by: Heidi Nasr

Mother Teresa founded the order of Roman Catholic nuns, the Missionaries of Charity, in 1948, and dedicated her life to helping the poor and the sick around the world.

Britain and the world bid farwell to Diana, Princess of Wales, on a sparkling September morning with a grand tribute rich in pageantry.

Diana's sons, William, 15, and Harry, 12, stood by their father, Prince Charles, and the Earl of Spencer, as they attended their mother's funeral. Etched in the world's memory forever will be their poignant bouquet of roses with a card for "Mummy" that rested upon Diana's casket.

John Denver died instantly on October 12, 1997, when his experimental plane crashed into Monterey Bay. "'His music sprang from his feelings of love'" said Hal Than, his longtime manager.

Epilogue

Letter From The Editor

Four years ago, as we nervously sat in Lower Level McIntosh anticipating the start of our college career, President Shapiro gave us her "Welcome to Barnard" speech. I remember very clearly something that President Shapiro said about us as the most recent class at Barnard: we were chosen specifically because the Admissions office felt that we belonged at Barnard College. Reassuring our parents, she said that "Barnard did not make a mistake when we decided to admit your daughters." That comment has remained with me since orientation because I have experienced the truth of that comment. We, the Barnard class of 1998, would not be the [illegible] we have become without the supportive and challenging environment Barnard has provided for us.

The years have gone by, and Barnard has shaped and molded us into a group of successful women. We have handed in our theses, ready to move on to the [illegible] world" of graduate school, work, or travel.

No matter what our future holds, Barnard has [illegible] us for the next stage of our life.

Working on this book for the past year has made me feel closer to the Barnard community, but more importantly I feel closer to our class. Through my staff of editors I have learned the uniqueness and strength of Barnard women. I thank each and every one of them for their hard work throughout the entire year, and their friendship. I will never forget this experience. Without it I would not have met an extraordinary group of women who have enriched my time here at the College: the Barnard class of 1998.

Best wishes to everyone.

From Reishma

How do I say goodbye to a place that has become home? How do I choose the words that may be my last?
These questions I've asked myself and this is the answer I have found . . .

While the music through the air is marching
I amidst a blue cloud float
Sweet the tears; heavy the laughter that clothe this long-awaited day of dreams and hopes Reflections on the knowledge gained, not only from books but from the mouths of faculty, staff, administrators, family and peers Appreciation for this space where I found the peace in which to discover the music of my soul and the words that let me sing
This place where I have loved truly, enough to shatter my bruised heart and where I learned to put the pieces back together in a whole that is more than the sum of its parts Here I cried silently and aloud, alone and with company and understood that it is the moment after tears that really matters (and so I can write this to you)
Here I took the time to hug the little girl inside me and the time to become an adult
Now, from familiar lips the names are read and I watch them go - the suitmates, the lovers, the friends those to whom I've never spoken but whom every day I'd see Finally, my name she speaks - the butterflies flutter; the dragon roars
"Hail Mary, full of grace"
A fleeting smile and a shake of the hand and though, like Marvin K. Mooney, I must now go, whether to a few blocks away or to a far off land
I leave a cherished part of me to a place that has given me precious more and I take with me the memories of these years that have taught me how to stand still amidst the chaos my head held high a woman among women
a sister among sisters proud in the confidence of my Barnard stride.

For my time at Barnard which has taught me not only to question, but more importantly, to answer.

Love Always,

Reishma Anissa Seupersad.
